

March 5

CAPTAIN LORI CLINE

“Today’s women in aviation have exceeded the boundaries our spirited pioneers originally set. For generations, the aviation world couldn’t imagine women commanding our space missions or protecting our skies. These realities have unfolded and now allow even more women to grow and succeed in areas that stretch far beyond the realm of the flight deck.

Many overcame opposition and adversity to turn opportunities in aviation into timeless triumphs. As we look toward the future, if the source of women’s accomplishments lies in the power of their imagination, then there is truly no limit to what they will achieve.”

Lori Cline, Managing Director, Flight Training and Standards, American Airlines